MEDIATION ATTENDANCE CONFIDENTIALITY AGREEMENT

Background

To ensure that the Mediation is private and confidential, this document is to be signed by all those in attendance who have not signed the Agreement to Mediate: this includes the Peoples' representatives, if any such are present, including but not limited to lawyers, trade union officials, and advisors to the People, other agreed attendees, and any observers – whether online or with the People.

Confidentiality Agreement

Anything said during the mediation is confidential to the People. Everyone who signs the Agreement to Mediate or this agreement agrees with and solemnly undertakes to each other to keep confidential everything said during the mediation and all matters arising from it. A person may disclose information only to the extent necessary to address a clear and present danger to others, for example if a potentially unlawful act has been or is about to be committed when normal laws would apply. This may include, amongst other things, a serious risk to children, vulnerable people or anyone's health or safety, including where an unlawful act has been committed or is about to be committed.
